Acode[®]

A scenic landscape photograph showing a dense forest of tall, thin trees in the background. In the foreground, there is a calm body of water, possibly a pond or a slow-moving stream, which reflects the sky and the surrounding vegetation. The water is surrounded by tall, dry grasses and reeds, some of which are in the immediate foreground, partially obscuring the water. The sky is filled with soft, white clouds, and the overall lighting suggests a peaceful, natural setting.

NEVER GIVE UP

Everyone needs to escape to the peace and quiet of the great outdoors from time to time. Activities such as hiking, hunting, foraging for mushrooms and long walks with the dog provide a welcome change from the hustle and bustle of urban life.

Most of the time, we dress appropriately so that we can stay warm and dry if we encounter bad weather and rough terrain. That's basic knowledge.

But how should you respond to an unforeseen situation? If dark, stormy weather takes you by surprise, or you realise you're lost. Perhaps you've injured yourself badly and can't go on without assistance. And what if you've left your phone at home?

Now you're in a serious situation. The decisions you make over the next few hours may even make the difference between life and death. So what should you do? We talked to a man who knows the answers.

Torbjörn Selin

Chief instructor and founding proprietor, All in Nature Sweden.

Survival skills instructor with the Swedish armed forces and the Swedish Survival Guild. Torbjörn has dedicated the past 18 years to teaching survival skills to over 1,000 people: soldiers, civilians, businesses and voluntary organisations.

”Praeparatus, supervivet”

TO SURVIVE, BE PREPARED

Survival is all about thinking ahead, planning, not biting off more than you can chew and not taking excessive risks. Survivors have the ability to adapt their actions to prevailing and changing circumstances. A true survivor won't tell any stories about being close to death, because that would indicate poor planning or sheer bad luck.”

As he talks, Torbjörn Selin pours steaming hot coffee from a charred pan on the fire. A survival skills instructor with the Swedish armed forces and the Swedish Survival Guild for more than 15 years, he has taught over 1,000 people how to look after themselves in a crisis situation outdoors.

“In a survival situation, life is at stake, and your actions can have a direct bearing on the outcome,” Torbjörn continues. “Knowledge, experience and equipment all affect your chances, but at least as important is the will to survive, to never give up and to never stop fighting. It's more a battle of will-power than a physical fight.”

The first thing to do: remember S-T-O-P

STOP Sit down for a while. Make a cup of coffee.

THINK calmly through your situation.

ORIENT yourself. Where are you? What equipment have you got?

PLAN Stay where you are or move on? Send out a distress call? Pitch camp?

Further advice

AVOID HYPOTHERMIA Protect yourself from dampness and the elements. Move around before settling down to sleep. Build a bed of spruce twigs to keep you off the cold ground. Sleep under a spruce tree, where it is usually dry.

TRY TO GET SOME SLEEP Initially this is more important than drinking water, because sleep deprivation will impair your judgement and ability to think fast. Even just a 'power nap' will reinvigorate you and help you focus.

GET YOUR BEARINGS Have you got a compass, or can you read your natural surroundings?

WATER You can only go without for a couple of days, so try to find as much water as you can. Boil it if possible.

IF YOUR SITUATION PERSISTS you will need food. Recognisable plants and berries within easy reach should be your first resort, and fish if possible.

Pine needle tea

Tea brewed from pine needles is refreshing and rich in vitamin C. Instructions: Place approximately 100 ml of pine needles in 300 ml of cold water and boil slowly for 10 minutes. Strain off the needles.

How to make a fire

Humans can survive without food for over 40 days but need water after three days.

Collect small dry twigs that are as dry as possible. If you can't find any dry branches, choose spruce, which is almost always dry inside. Gather more sticks than you think you'll need, and do so in daylight.

Using your knife, carve the sticks into shavings to use as kindling. Dead, dry spruce twigs make good kindling,

Use a fire starter to make sparks and ignite the fire. A lighter may stop working, but a fire starter will always work.

Ignite the fire in stages, adding more kindling as the fire takes hold. Keep the sticks under cover while you are getting the fire lit.

You now have a fire that you have to keep alight. Dry off new firewood next to the blaze. Place some stones close to the fire to warm up, so you can use them to warm yourself when you're trying to sleep.

Water resistance

Are you planning outdoor activities and want to keep warm and dry? Then make sure you buy waterproof garments. Water column, a value given in millimetres, is often mentioned in the garment's specification but what does it mean?

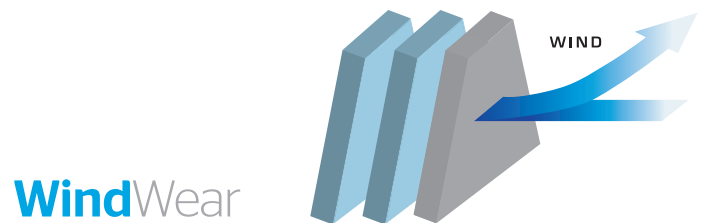

Water column is a measure that is used to specify how large a water pressure a garment will withstand before it starts to leak. The material is tested for waterproof qualities using a "water column", a tube with a diameter of approx. 2.5 cm. While the tube is placed vertically onto the material, water is poured in. The height of the water when the material starts to leak is then recorded. A water column value of 10,000 mm means a load of 10 metres water depth in the tube.

Water column values

0	Not waterproof.
0–2000	Can be water resistant, but not waterproof.
2000–5000	Waterproof against rain, but not resistant to pressure. Leaks when sitting or leaning against wet surfaces.
5000–15000	Fully waterproof in rain and resistant to many forms of pressure. Only at very high pressure, for example, prolonged sitting begins to leak the material.
15000–30000	Fully waterproof, even under the most extreme pressure.

Acode AirWEAR has been developed to allow your body to breathe and to keep you dry and comfortable. A perfect choice for an active lifestyle.

Acode WindWEAR is the perfect choice when you need to keep dry and warm in wind, rain and snow. Available in both unlined and lined.

CoolPass

Our garments in CoolPass functional material are worn next to the body, effectively transporting moisture away from the skin to the outer layer of the garment, where it evaporates from the skin. Perfect for physical activity.

SoftShell

The traditional softshell material is very resistant to wind and water, has a durable surface and a reverse with a membrane of soft microfleece.

DoubleFace

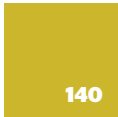

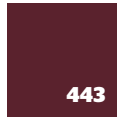

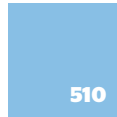

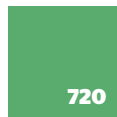

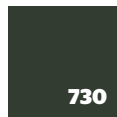

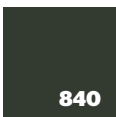

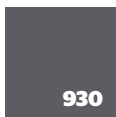

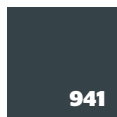

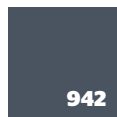

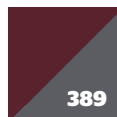

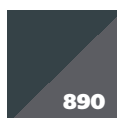

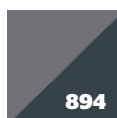

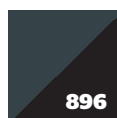

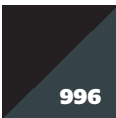

Our sweatshirt gives you that little bit extra. Double faced means that the outside of the fabric is identical to that on the reverse. A slightly thicker sweatshirt material that offers an exclusive finish while retaining the fit.

SoftShell Light

Softshell Light is a very light, soft and flexible membrane-free material with 4-way stretch. It has excellent breathability and a water-repellent surface.
